Biography

Bradley Smith is the Director of Electrical Estimating with over 12 years of experience in the electrical industry, including seven years specializing in estimating for complex commercial and industrial projects. He is a valued member of the Planning and Construction Advisory Services team at YA Group, where he focuses on delivering accurate, competitive, and strategically aligned electrical estimates that support successful project execution.

Bradley has extensive experience estimating projects across a wide range of sectors, including medical and hospital facilities, higher education institutions, and federal and state-funded developments. This background has given him a strong understanding of the unique requirements, codes, compliance standards, and coordination challenges associated with highly regulated and mission-critical environments.

Throughout his career, Bradley worked closely with internal and external project teams, vendors, and clients to develop reliable estimates that align with project goals and budgets. Known for his deep knowledge of electrical systems, constructability, and cost analysis, he consistently applied a detail-driven and collaborative approach to ensure projects were positioned for success from the earliest stages.
